INTRODUCTION

Federal Offenders in the United States District Courts, 1986 through 1990 is the 20th edition of this series and the first edition since 1985. This publication includes a presentation of tables and an analysis of filing and disposition data for defendants in the U.S. district courts during the decade of the '80's. All references to year in this report apply to the twelve month period ended June 30.

Part I of the publication contains a narrative analysis of national trends during the past five to ten years, with graphs and tables of case filings, defendant proceedings and dispositions. Historical data reflecting sentence and other disposition information for selected offenses of national interest are presented in the Historical Tables provided in Part II. These tables display 20 or more years of data.

Additional tables are included in the Appendix, Part III. Tables D-4 and D-5 show disposition and type of sentence by major offense category. Table D-7 shows total dispositions and types of sentences in each district. Tables have been included in the appendix for each year since 1980 to provide a historical overview.

Any questions concerning the data in this publication should be directed to the Analysis and Reports Branch, Statistics Division, on FTS 633-6036.

Part I

ANALYSIS

CRIMINAL CASES

A criminal case for the purpose of this publication is an original proceeding by which a person charged with a criminal offense appears before a judicial officer. Proceedings such as probation revocation hearings, extraditions, and hearings on ancillary matters are not considered cases for the purpose of this publication.

In 1990, criminal filings reached 48,904 including interdistrict transfers. This was a 24 percent increase over 1985 and a 69 percent increase over 1980. As shown in Table T-1, criminal filings have increased every year since 1980. The trend in criminal cases terminated during this period mirrored the trend in filings. In 1990, a total of 44,295 cases were terminated, up 19 percent over 1985 and 51 percent over 1980. Even though terminations increased considerably, filings were consistently higher; as a result pending criminal cases were 141 percent higher than the 1980 level.

The driving force behind the rise in criminal filings during the 1980's was the dramatic increase in drug cases. (See Table T-1.) Drug filings increased almost 300 percent from 1980 to 1990 as Congress and the Department of Justice focussed resources on illegal drug activity. As a side effect of drug enforcement activity, prosecutions of related criminal offenses also skyrocketed. The Immigration and Naturalization Service and

Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms were heavily involved in the fight against drugs. Their ability to pursue weapons or immigration violations has offered additional avenues for pursuing drug gangs and networks. Cases involving weapons or firearms increased 192 percent since 1980 while immigration prosecutions increased 31 percent during the same time period.

Other significant increases occurred in filings of fraud cases, up 64 percent since 1980 and 26 percent since 1985. This increase can be attributed in part to the recent savings and loan scandal. Cases filed charging drunk driving also rose significantly during the decade, up 88 percent since 1980. However, in 1990 nearly three fourths of all traffic-related cases were confined to five districts with large areas of military or Federal park jurisdiction.

CRIMINAL DEFENDANTS

The average number of defendants involved in each case filed in the district courts remained at 1.4 for all criminal cases from 1980 to 1990. However, on the average, drug cases involved nearly two defendants per case (1.8). As a result, the marked increase in drug filings created an even heavier burden on the courts.

In 1990, approximately 45 percent of the defendants prosecuted in the U.S. district courts were charged with violations of drug laws or the related offenses of weapons and immigration violations as opposed to 35 percent in 1985. Table T-2 is a summary of defendants commenced in the U.S. district courts by offense and year. This table excludes defendants transferred tc another district.

DISPOSITION OF CRIMINAL DEFENDANTS

In 1990, of the 56,519 defendants whose cases were closed, 17 percent were not convicted. This is slightly less than the 19 percent not convicted in each of the previous 5 years. The majority of those not convicted were dismissed (84 percent) and the remaining defendants were acquitted. Of the other defendants whose cases were closed, 83 percent (46,725) were convicted and 87 percent of those convicted plead guilty or nolo contendere. (See Table T-3.) These disposition rates have remained consistent since 1982.

The conviction rate for drugs and related cases (immigration laws and weapons and firearms) was one of the highest at 85 percent. Robbery, fraud, and forgery and counterfeiting also had high conviction rates at 92 percent, 89 percent, and 88 percent, respectively. On the other hand, conviction rates for drunk driving and traffic offenses were much lower at only 68 percent. The conviction rates for all of these offenses have remained basically the same over the past five years. Appendix Tables D-4 show detailed disposition data by type of offense from 1980 through 1990.

MEDIAN TIME FOR DISPOSITIONS BY TYPE OF PROCEEDING

Table T-4 shows the median time in months from filing to disposition of defendants by type of disposition from 1980 to 1990. The median time from filing of an indictment or information to disposition of a defendant's case increased from 1980 to 1984, then dropped significantly in 1985. This drop occurred in each type of disposition shown. The median time then rose again steadily from 3.0 months in 1985 to 4.5 months in 1990. Part of the increase between 1985 and 1990 is due to the longer times being reported for the period from conviction to sentencing. This increased time resulted, in part, from the procedures implemented to accommodate the Sentencing Guidelines. The increased drug caseload also affected the length of time for disposing of criminal cases. Drug cases often are linked, with the same defendants involved in several cases. One defendant's testimony against a defendant in another case may be part of a plea bargain. Until this testimony is assured, U.S. attorneys will continue one or more cases that eventually end in a plea to lesser charges or dismissal. In addition, scheduling of these events causes its own delays in processing. As a result, the median time from filing to disposition in dismissed cases also increased during the past six years, even though it is considerably below the median time for cases dismissed in 1980.

TYPE AND LENGTH OF SENTENCE FOR CONVICTED DEFENDANTS

The types of sentences given to persons convicted in U.S. district courts have changed significantly over the past ten years, partly due to the Sentencing Guidelines developed by the U.S. Sentencing Commission and enacted in 1987. The guidelines more often require judges to impose prison sentences followed by a term of supervised release in situations where probation may have been imposed in the past. As a result, the proportion of defendants sentenced to prison (including split sentences) in relation to the number convicted increased from 46 percent in 1980 to 59 percent in 1990. In contrast, the percent of convicted defendants given probation decreased from 39 to 30 percent and other sentences decreased from 15 to 10 percent during the same time period. (See Graph G-1.)

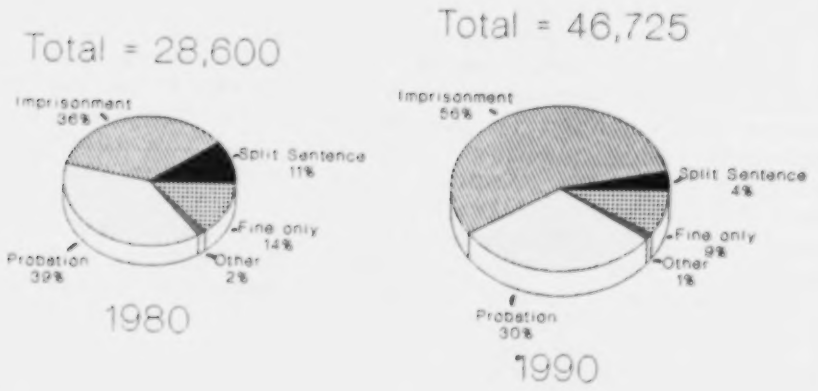
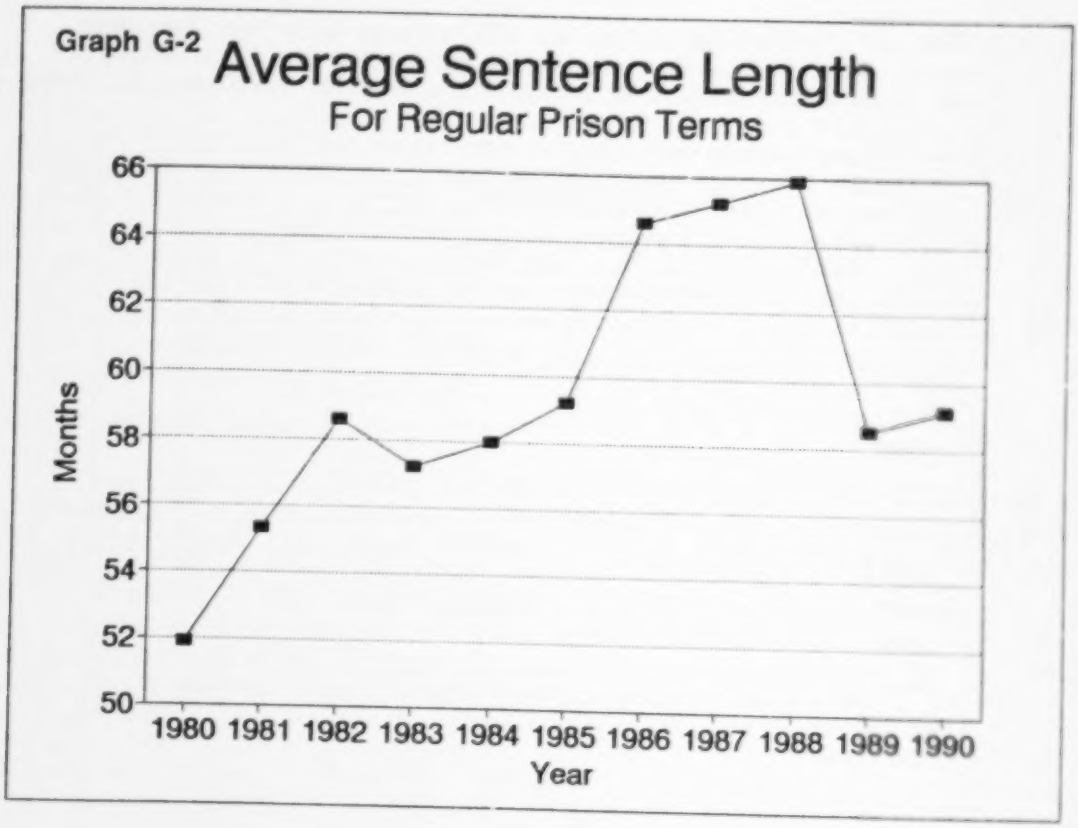
Change in Types of Sentences



NOTE: DUE TO ROUNDING PERCENTS MAY NOT ADD TO 100.0 PERCENT

The Sentencing Guidelines also affected the average length of prison term imposed. As shown in Graph G-2, from 1980 to 1988 the average prison term rose every year but one, increasing from 52 months to 66 months. The effects of the Sentencing Guidelines are seen in 1989 when the average sentence dropped to 58.5 months. This drop resulted because the guidelines often call for a short prison term where probation may have been imposed in the past. While the overall average prison term dropped, the actual average time served is expected to rise. Prior to the guidelines, regular terms of imprisonment allowed for parole after as little as one third of the sentence was served in prison. The Sentencing Reform Act of 1984 eliminated parole for offenders committed to Federal institutions. The only reduction in prison terms imposed by the guidelines is 54 days per year for good behavior. As a result, while the full length of prison terms dictated by the guidelines is sometimes less than the terms under the old laws, the overall effect is longer periods of incarceration. In using the average length of prison term as a measure of the effect of the guidelines, however, it should be noted that defendants sentenced to terms of life imprisonment are not included in the average sentences for each year.



DISPOSITIONS INVOLVING DRUGS AND RELATED CASES

The increase in drug cases, which began in 1980, is attributed to the massive increase in Assistant U.S. Attorneys available to prosecute drug cases and a halt in the decline in the number of FBI and DEA agents. In addition, penalties for drug convictions in Federal courts were consistently stiffer throughout the decade encouraging Federal-state cooperation in bringing more cases to Federal rather than state courts. The establishment of Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Forces within Department of Justice to coordinate efforts to interdict illegal drugs added 1,200 positions in October 1983. Further political support for the crackdown on drugs was shown with the passage of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 and the hiring of more than 400 additional DEA agents. By the close of 1987, another 240 Federal prosecutors were added and drug cases continued to increase sharply. A second bill, the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988, targeted other crimes related to drugs. This Act added 70 inspectors and 435 border patrol agents to the Immigration and Naturalization Service and 234 agents for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, which has grown by 700 agents since 1985. As a result, the number of defendants charged with weapons and firearms violations increased dramatically during the 1980's, up 149 percent. Immigration prosecutions increased 14 percent over the same period of time. However, from 1980 to 1987 the number of defendants charged with immigration violations fluctuated significantly. Then, in 1988, as new inspectors and border patrol agents were hired, these filings began to steadily increase. See Graph G-3. Graph G-4 shows the increase in drug filings by type of drug from 1980 to 1990.

In 1990, of the 19,271 defendants disposed of in drug cases, 84 percent (16,188) were convicted, up slightly from the 82 percent convicted in 1985. During this same time period, the average prison sentence increased from 64.8 months to 79.3 months. From 1985 to 1990, the number of defendants convicted for weapons and firearms violations increased 53 percent, and the percent convicted also increased slightly from 83 percent to 85 percent. Convictions for immigration violations fluctuated during this time but increased overall by 6 percent. The conviction rate for immigration charges remains one of the highest at approximately 90 percent. Historical Tables H-1, H-5 and H-9 provide data on immigration violations, weapons and firearms violations and drug violations from 1966 to 1990.

DISPOSITIONS IN FRAUD CASES

From 1980 to 1990, fraud convictions increased 72 percent, accounting for approximately 16 percent of all persons convicted. The majority of the fraud convictions in 1990 were for false claims and statements (1,696), postal, interstate wire and radio fraud (1,477), lending and credit institutions fraud (1,169), and income tax fraud (1,048). Fraud committed against lending and credit institutions increased over 200 percent from 1980 to 1990. Much of this increase occurred after 1985, due in part to the savings and loan scandal. Historical Table H-6 provides data on fraud convictions, excluding income tax fraud; Table H-2 shows income tax fraud. Graph G-5 compares the number of convictions for various types of fraud offenses in both 1980 and 1990.

DISPOSITIONS IN HOMICIDE CASES

While the number of defendants charged with homicide in the Federal courts fluctuated throughout the '80's, there was a 41 percent increase from 1980 to 1990. However, the number of defendants disposed of during that time period remained somewhat stable with a small decrease. These cases may still be pending or the defendants may have been convicted on another charge. Even though the number of defendants disposed of remained stable, the percent convicted of homicide increased from 64 percent in 1980 to 80 percent in 1990. Average sentence length fluctuated significantly during this time with a low of 111.8 months in 1981 to 191.2 months in 1986. Since the number of defendants charged with homicide is small and those sentenced to life in prison are not included in calculating the average sentence length, it is not clear whether homicide cases have been directly affected by the Sentencing Guidelines. Historical Table H-4 provides data on homicide convictions from 1966 to 1990.

DISPOSITIONS IN SEX ABUSE CASES

Defendants charged with sex abuse increased 94 percent from 122 in 1980 to 237 in 1990 while defendants disposed of during the same time period increased 114 percent. As with other offenses, the percent of defendants convicted increased steadily, although with some mild fluctuations in the early 80's. In 1980, the conviction rate was 64 percent; by 1990, it rose to 77 percent. The average sentence length also fluctuated considerably during this time; but, aside from a jump to 197.5 months in 1987, decreased from 150.1 months in 1985 to 91.9 months in 1990. This decrease in average sentence length may be the result of an increase in prosecutions of cases where the prison term is less than five years. Historical Table H-7 provides data on sex abuse convictions from 1970 to 1990.

DISPOSITIONS IN FORGERY AND COUNTERFEITING CASES

From 1980 to 1990, both the number of defendants charged with forgery and counterfeiting and the number disposed of decreased, although the conviction rate increased slightly from 84 percent in 1980 to 88 percent in 1990. The average sentence length for these cases also dropped dramatically, ranging from 40 to 48 months during 1980 to 1986 then dropping to 18 months in 1990. The Sentencing Guidelines call for a lower base penalty for these cases than was previously given. This base penalty then increases in increments according to the amount of money involved in each crime. As a result, many more defendants were sentenced in 1989 and 1990 to terms of less than 3 years than in prior years. This decrease in average sentence length, however, must be weighed in the context of "real time" rather than imprisonment followed by parole. As mentioned earlier in this report, the only reduction in a prison term is 54 days per year since the possibility of parole was eliminated; therefore, actual periods of incarceration will be longer. Historical Table H-3 provides data on forgery and counterfeiting convictions from 1966 to 1990.

FOOTNOTES FOR HISTORICAL TABLES

1 Includes defendants who plead nolo contendere (not more than 2 percent of total guilty in any year).

2 Includes Federal Juvenile Delinquency Act sentences, sentences imposed under Title 18 U.S.C. Section 4205 (a) with parole eligibility, and (after 1987) sentences imposed under the guidelines of the U.S. Sentencing Commission. Sentences of more than six months in prison followed by probation are also included.

3 For regular imprisonment sentences only. Life sentences are not included under regular imprisonment or in the averages after 1977.

4 Includes sentences of six months or less imprisonment to be followed by probation.

5 Imprisonment imposed under Title 18 U.S.C. Section 4205 (b) (1) or (2). (Repealed for offenders committing crimes after 11/1/87.) Included under regular imprisonment prior to 1978.

6 Youth Corrections Act and Youth Offender Sentences (repealed 10-14-84). Included in regular imprisonment prior to 1978.

7 Other includes the following: deportation; suspended sentence; imprisonment for four days or less or for time already served; remitted and suspended fines; and life sentences (beginning in 1978).

Other Notes: The District of Columbia is excluded from the data through 1973. The territorial courts of the Virgin Islands, Canal Zone, and Guam are excluded through 1976.
